July 2021 Newsletter

Note from the UAA Board

The highlight of the past month was the publication of the USAID history, The Enduring Struggle: The History of the U.S. Agency for International Development and America's Uneasy Transformation of the World. Other UAA activities also kept us busy. Over the past couple of years, UAA's activities have expanded to include a larger mentoring program for USAID officers; a new focus on diversity, equity and inclusion; collaborative work with all parts of USAID under the USAID/UAA Memorandum of Understanding; and engagement on public issues, as well as continuing events to explore development issues and help maintain connections among retirees. We welcome more volunteers to keep these activities going! Please contact us at office@usaidalumni.org if you're interested in joining a UAA committee or helping address particular issues.

"A Late Show" Host Colbert interviews USAID Administrator Power

Stephen Colbert and Samantha Power

On June 10, 2021, USAID Administrator Samantha Power participated in a one-on-one interview with Stephen Colbert on his nighttime "A Late Show." Colbert asked questions to educate the audience about the role of the US Agency for International Development in the world. Power explained the global presence and breadth of focus of USAID's engagement, both in terms of development content and geography – "a soft power arsenal." She also discussed the "major" job for USAID in the $500 million vaccine doses to developing countries and the agency's role as the primary entity in exercising President Biden's "root causes strategy" in the Northern Triangle for the border issue. For you early-to-bed members who may have missed this late-night show, you can view the interview by clicking here.

UAA Development Dialogue at DACOR

Jim Michel and Andrew Natsios

On June 18, 2021, former USAID Administrator Andrew Natsios entertained about 100 UAA and DACOR members at a very candid and stimulating session of the Development Dialogue at DACOR, co-hosted on behalf of the UAA by Ambassador Jim Michel. Natsios described his new co-edited book Transforming Our World: President George H.W. Bush and American Foreign Policy. Natsios, currently Director of the Scowcroft Institute of International Affairs at the Bush School of Government and Public Policy, Texas A&M University, briefly described the gist of each of the book's chapters, peppering his comments with many interesting anecdotes and personal stories. He often referred, with great appreciation, to individual USAID alumni with whom he had worked closely during his period as director of the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance (OFDA). Click here to see a video of his talk and the Q&A session that followed.

On Wednesday, July 7, 2021 the UAA/DACOR Development Dialogue featured the Honorable Greg Starr, lead author of a recent American Academy of Diplomacy report, Changing the Risk Paradigm For US Diplomats. Starr, former U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for Diplomatic Security, described the origin of the report and highlighted its three major recommendations designed to address the alarming level of risk intolerance in the State Department and in U.S. missions abroad. Two very experienced former USAID mission directors, Jim Bever and Chris Crowley, strongly endorsed the report's findings and reflected on the serious impact such constraints have on USAID staff being able to carry out the agency's programs. Watch the video of the session, including the Q&A period, here.

UAA Development Issues

Bonnie Glick    Justin Finnegan

On June 16, 2021, the Development Issues Committee sponsored a highly informative discussion of "U.S. Assistance is More Valuable than One Belt, One Road; A Conversation about Competition with China," attended by about 40 UAA alumni. The discussion leaders were Bonnie Glick, Senior Advisor at the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) and former USAID Deputy Administrator from 2019-2020, and Justin Finnegan, Managing Director of Asia/Pacific (APAC) for Bloomberg New Economy and former Deputy Assistant Administrator in USAID's Bureau for Food Security.

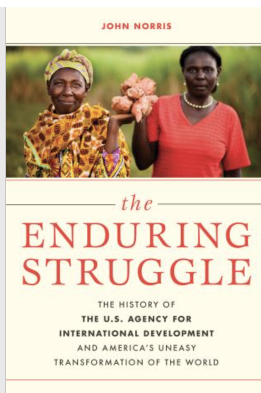

The remarks of the two discussion leaders were followed by a robust Q & A session that touched on World Bank approaches, natural resources, telecommunications, and the need for a more coordinated approach to development assistance. A more complete summary of the discussion can be found here.

USAID Book Club

The UAA Book Club held a virtual meeting with 10 participants via Zoom on June 23, 2021, for which Joe Ryan led a review of The Authoritarians, 2006, by Bob Altemeyer. The interesting thing for UAA about Prof. Altemeyer's online book is that it is relevant for the question about whether populations have a taste for international cooperation, or whether to the contrary they tend to be hostile to foreigners. Copies of Joe's presentations for the review and a pdf copy of the book itself can be found on the UAA website by clicking here.

USAID History Project

The USAID history by John Norris entitled The Enduring Struggle: The History of the U.S. Agency for International Development and America's Uneasy Transformation of the World, has been published, and copies are now available for purchase. (To buy the book from the publisher at a 30 percent discount please use the form at this link). There are already three events coming up in which John Norris will talk about the book: at the ADST Diplomatic Lunch on July 29, at a UAA/DACOR Development Dialogue on September 15, and at the UAA Annual General Meeting on October 29. There will no doubt be other events scheduled, including a UAA Book Club discussion. Alumni with suggestions for events that will popularize the book and/or generate reviews should send their suggestions to Alex Shakow at ashakow@comcast.net.

Alumni Profile: Denise Rollins

Denise Rollins with son Amari, his friend Cara, & grandpuppy Najee

Denise Rollins had planned to become a pharmacist when she graduated from high school in Detroit. Her counselor, Mr. Stewart, tried to convince her to become a teacher instead, because "you're only going to get married and your husband will take care of you." Undeterred, she applied for and was accepted at Wayne State University's College of Pharmacy. After four years at Wayne, she realized that she had a wanderlust not satisfied by filling prescriptions for the rest of her life. How she ended up as a Senior Foreign Service Officer (Minister Counselor) on a 27-year journey is a story to be told.

Denise's stint in the foreign service allowed her to serve in six countries -- Jamaica, Ghana, Uganda, Nigeria, South Africa as Deputy Mission Director, and Bangladesh as Mission Director. After serving 23 consecutive years overseas, she returned to Washington as Senior Deputy Assistant Administrator for Asia Bureau, and later as Acting Assistant Administrator. She retired in December 2014 and was called back by the Agency in February 2015 to lead the Agency's Africa Ebola Unit for 18 months.

Denise's road to USAID was long and winding with many stops along the way, including:

- Dropping pharmacy studies after four years;
- Working on Capitol Hill for Congressman John Conyers during the Nixon impeachment era and for Rep. Paul Simon on Black Lung Disease;

- Traveling to the Second World Black and African Festival of Arts and Culture (Festac '77) in Lagos, Nigeria where she "witnessed first-hand the significance of development and its impact on the people of the country";
- Establishing a Nigerian business company in London;
- Joining the African American Institute Performing Arts Program; and
- Completing her BA at Howard University and a Masters of International Public Policy in international economics and finance at Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies.

Denise joined USAID in November 1987 and has not missed a beat since during her whirlwind experience. She met her husband on her first assignment in Jamaica, and they raised their son overseas. She received numerous awards for her work over the years, including the USAID Administrator's Award for Distinguished Career Service.

Since retiring in 2016, Denise serves as board member of two performing arts organizations – Dance Place and the Women's Committee of Washington Performing Arts. Denise has been associated with Dance Place since 1981 when the National Dance Theater of Zaire visited the United States. She became Board Member in 2015, and Board Chair in 2017. As an officer on the Women's Committee, she helps promote and supports performances presented by Washington Performing Arts. She enjoys attending performances at Arena Stage, Kennedy Center, Strathmore and 6th & I Synagogue.

We wonder what Mr. Stewart would say now about Denise's career prospects? Friends and former colleagues can contact her at denise\_rollins@hotmail.com.
