

ADST Features George Carner's Oral History: Ending the Locust Plague

USAID Foreign Service Officer George Carner found himself with a unique challenge when he arrived in Senegal in summer 1986. Faced with a swarm of locusts of Biblical proportions, Carner coordinated with government contractors to spray most of the country with pesticides while ensuring that there was minimal impact to the health, political, or religious aspects of local society. Read the story here: <https://adst.org/2022/05/senegals-locust-plague-in-the-late-1980s/>